BEBEK TEPI SAWAH
RESTAURANT & GALLERY
UBUD BALI

The image shows a large, dark grey, rounded rock in a lush, tropical garden setting. Several realistic-looking ducks of various breeds are perched on the rock. One duck is on the ground in the foreground, looking towards the rock. The background features a traditional Balinese building with a thatched roof, a large white umbrella on a wooden pole, and various tropical plants. The ground is paved with grey cobblestones.

Welcome to our restaurant

The History of Ducks in Bali, and in Bebek Tepi Sawah

---

Bebek Tepi Sawah translates to “Duck by the Rice Paddy”. Ducks and Rice Paddies have long been part of the Balinese landscape, especially in Ubud where rice paddies used to be plentiful. The locals grew rice, which would sometimes attract pests like small bugs. The Balinese soon realised that the local ducks loved feeding on the pests, but did not care much for the rice. Hence, rice farmers began to raise ducks alongside growing rice paddies as a natural pest control.

The Balinese ducks were organic, free to roam the rice paddies, living happy and healthy lives. Our love of this tradition led us to name the restaurant “Bebek Tepi Sawah”. We hope that you enjoy our signature crispy duck dish with beautiful views of rice paddies.

Selamat menikmati!

What is the difference between Balinese Duck and other ducks served at restaurants?

---

The Balinese ducks that we use in Bebek Tepi Sawah are completely organic, free range, antibiotic free and raised by local farmers. As a result, Compared to commercially raised Javanese duck or Chinese peking duck, Balinese ducks are leaner, smaller and gamier in taste. Full of flavour and a unique experience.

The Magic of Bumbu Bali

Bumbu Bali or “Balinese spice mix” is the mother sauce of Balinese cuisine. From meats, to vegetables, this spice mix is used in almost every dish as the backbone of Balinese cuisine. It is similar to Chinese five spice, in that the blend is unique to every restaurant, but also different as the spices are usually fresh instead of dried. Unlike most Balinese restaurants, at Bebek Tepi Sawah, we produce our own Bumbu Bali, instead of buying commercially made ones at the market. Bumbu Bali is labour intensive, with more than 10 different ingredients mixed in. At Bebek Tepi Sawah, we make our Bumbu Bali from fresh, organic and locally sourced ingredients such as ginger, galangal, shallots, chillies, fresh peppercorns and so much more. Our Bumbu Bali recipe helms from our family’s long history in Bali, with our ancestors dating back to 8th Century. Bumbu Bali is the foundation of our food, full of tradition, flavour and love.
